7566. In English and Latin, on paper : written by J. Ramsey, Edinburgh, in 1798 :  $8\frac{1}{2} \times 5\frac{1}{4}$  in., x + 372 pages.

'Cases in the Clinical Wards of the Royal Infirmary : Edinburgh under Dr Gregory. Vol: 1', under the writer's name 'James Ramsey, Edinburgh, Nov<sup>r</sup> 1, 1798' on fol. iii. Some cases are incomplete, the continuations being in a 2nd vol. which is not here. With index on pp. v-vii, 370-1.

This is a good picture of hospital practice in Edinburgh at the end of the 18th century. They are the notes of the house physician or possibly a clinical clerk. This MS. differs from the other Edinburgh Infirmary MSS., Rutherford's (no. 7621) and John Gregory's (no. 7568), which are notes of the clinical lectures. [W. O.]

(Smith)

The different parts of his body are considerably swollen at different times. - his face, hands, & belly are swollen in the morning; but his legs chiefly so in the evening. The swelling is adreptic; - but the parts occupied by it do not retain the impression of the finger. He has frequent short cough, usually pain in the left side of the chest, & at times in the head, with some difficulty of breathing, particularly when he uses exercise. He is unable to lie on the left side on account of pain. He has a round spot on

2 The left side of the forehead. This last not urgent in the right time with much throbs. The other functions are natural. He fell & was injured 16 days ago. He had a severe accident upon his head 6 years ago: but the headache did not affate him until the attack of his present symptoms. In his business he is subject to vicissitudes of heat & cold. No remedies to-day.

Nov 90 (Smith)

Complains of great difficulty of breathing, accompanied with much pain and giddings on full expiration.
He has frequent shifting pain in his chest & belly: much cough with difficult expectoration of a white frothy matter.
After each fit of coughing he feels a great inclination to vomit. Tongue very foul & cracked. Internal pulses very dry & lined.
Pulse 110; strong & hard. Much thirst. Skin hot. Appetite impaired. Sleep bad.
Bowels natural. These symptoms came on three weeks ago from exposure to cold, with a cough, with which the other symptoms have become very violent within these last eight days.

For the cornea lucida of both eyes There is a considerable white opaque space. The pupil of the right eye seems entirely occupied by it; and that of the left nearly so. Towards the inferior part of the former several large vessels are seen.
He has much pain from the action of a strong light upon that eye. The vision of both is much impaired. His general health is good. His eyes have been thus Complains of much numbness and very great debility of the lower extremities, so great as almost entirely prevent his walking. He is also affected with considerable vertigo, particularly when he attempts to turn in walking.

The pupil of the left eye is much dilated: & the iris appears to contract very little from the action of light. Pulse & appetite natu-habit of taking occasionally, the only he was prescribed. During the course of the last illness he was gradually affected with the present symptoms: & about a month ago he came into the hospital under the care of Dr Hamilton; & went out again in ten days with some relief, which lasted however only for three or four days.

Quincy Mac' Culloch, et al 50.

Moony (Cushman)

Complains of great debility, & a small & difficulty of breath, attended with a wheezing cough, particularly in the morning & evening, with copious thin viscid expectoration. Complains also of much pain, beginning in the middle of his back, extending up to his shoulders & down. He is afflicted with frequent cold clammy sweats, thereby the influence of which he has some pain in the joints of his arms & knees.
Sleep frequently disturbed by startings.
Pulse about 96. Much thirst in the night. Tongue white, but moist.

 Pulse high, cobard, & voided much thinner than natural, but in smaller quantity, . . . Appetite impaired.
 Belly natural.

The above complaints began about two or three months since, by which he was confined to his bed the greater part of last winter. He became much better during the spring, which he attributes to the medicine he had from Dr. Duncan. He continued in tolerably good health until about three months since, when he was attacked by his present symptoms, which he attributes to exposure to cold & moisture. He has been Complains of severe pain at the pit of her stomach, extending to the right side, &c, as she says, much increased upon pressure. She has also great difficulty of breathing, attended with a frequent cough, extremely distressing during the night: - much expectoration of a thick mucous matter, having a Sweetish Taste, & sometimes tinged with blood. She has occasionally expe-rienced for two months past a sensation of coldness, & at times, of shivering, followed by flushes; but has never had any quantity of it. Pulse about 72.

 Tongue clear; appetite impaired.
 Her health has been in a delicate state for some years. The catarrh ceased to appear about four years ago; since that period she has seldom been free from a slight cough, but within these two months, her complaints have become very severe, & the spitting of blood more frequent. She has used no remedies.

I suffered with constant dyspnea, attended with acute pain in the left side, which prevents him from taking a full expiration. Frequent cough, with copious expectoration; which, he says, has a white frothy appearance. Bad sleep occasioned by the frequency of the cough. Pulse 105 - much thirst. Tongue clean and moist. Appetite impaired.

Belly natural. The right eye is entirely destroyed by an opacity covering the whole of the cornea. And that of the left eye is also somewhat impaired by several pague spots on the left side of the cornea of that eye. The affections of the breast began suddenly, about 3 weeks since, after a slight exposure to cold; when in a state of expectation. Eight days ago he had a blister applied to his breast, which procured him <sup>a dose of</sup> some relief. On Sunday last he took ~~the~~ <sup>it</sup>, which operated fully, but without any relief. The affection of his eyes began about 12 years ago; after having had the small-pox.

Nov 11

Is affected with severe pain at the lower part of the back, extending down the abdomen. She has some difficulty in making water & complains also of pains in her limbs. Pulse 102; small. Tongue foul; some thirst. She says that she has had the pains these six months; & dates their origin from the time that some ~~phlegm~~ <sup>phlegm</sup> were removed from her back & breast by the application of a blue ointment. Her way is indistinct in the history of her ailments, which are probably more violent than usual to-day, from her having walked more than six miles yesterday in a hurry. — attended with copious mucous expectoration; — often mixed with blood. Cannot lie in an horizontal posture from the great difficulty of breathing in then experiences. Sleep, which can only be attained in the erect posture, is accompanied with much groaning & muttering. Last night he had frequent dreams & starting. His legs & feet are very oedematous. Pulse 120. Tongue rather white & moist. Bad taste in his mouth.

Urine, as he says, very turbid. Bowels affections about two years. About six weeks ago had a violent attack of it in his thigh & arms, which from the application of warm flannels was entirely removed about ten days since, when he was immediately seized with a slight chilliness, pain of his breast, & difficulty of breathing, on the 10th of the same day 2nd course of the powder of his lower extremities began. He has had Calomel & quill pills, which, he thinks, did him great service. On the 18th he had a vomit of Opac.: & on the following day he had a blister, which acted very well

The glands of the right mamma are somewhat enlarged & hardened; & measure about the size of a finger; & about three inches in length, which extends across the mamma. She at times feels a pressing pain in these indurated glands, stretching towards the axilla; & which she particularly describes to be much more severe than usual at the period of menstruation. It is now 4 months since she first observed this enlargement, when she applied a poultice for six or seven weeks, when pain commenced, & she discontinued it. She has taken some coccolle pills. Complains of great debility & numbpower of motion in the left arm is entirely lost; & that of the right is so much diminished that he is unable to raise it higher than the pit of his stomach. The sensibility of his arms this side however does not appear to be diminished in any sensible degree.

He has also constant pain & weakness Complains likewise of blindness whenever he stands for a few minutes; & at times is affected with difficulty of speech & swallowing.

Complains of severe pain in her left side stretching across the bottom of her chest, much increased on drawing a full inspiration. Difficulty of breathing, & frequent cough attended with some expectoration, sometimes copious: but more painful to day than usual. She can only lie on her right side, the pain becoming very violent when she attempts to lie on her left side or back. Pulse 112. Throat urgent. Tongue clean, but rather dry. Countenance much flushed, & of a dark color: the lips very livid. She says her countenance frequently has this appearance, when her cough is violent. She has been subject to a cough 10 months, which has frequently been very severe. He was last summer in this house under the care of Dr Hope with nearly the same symptoms as at present, & went out much relieved. They have however recurred with much violence about a fortnight ago.

 breathing is very difficult; she has a frequent & severe cough attended with an expectoration of a thick yellow mucus. The cough is much increased when she attempts to lie on her right side. Pulse about 120, & somewhat fable. She has had a natural discharge for some days bygone.

Her eyes have been red & watery. About 18 months since the catamenia appeared for once only: & that in a light degree.

She has been subject to Cough & expectoration from her infancy, which she says, was brought on by the hooping cough. The swellings of the limbs & other parts of the body appeared only about 2 months ago. She has taken some pills, which purged her violently, but none for the last 3 weeks. Her legs were punctured a little below the knee about that time, & there is still a discharge of 50 the transparent fluid from the wounds. These have a very healthy appearance & are probably the cause of the erythema of the right leg already described.

Complains of violent pain in her left side increased on full inspiration, & attended with cough, evidently spasmodic, and unaccompanied with expectoration. She is liable to palpitation of the heart; & a sensation of weight in the head, which are alleviated by lying in the horizontal posture. Her last night terminated in syncope, which continued about ten minutes; & has recurred three times since. The pain of her side is increased after meals; She is sometimes troubled with nausea. Five or six times in the day; about three as often in the night is attended with fits of Pyrosis. These continue about a minute; the early two table spoonfuls of clear saliva run from his mouth during each fit. He makes efforts to swallow the saliva as it rises; but the muscles of the oesophagus appear to be convulsed; & a noise is made, resembling the gurgling of a fluid, when poured hastily from a bottle. The fits are attended with a sense of suffocation, arising, as he describes it, from a lump in his throat. Yesterday morning tremors followed the its, particularly of the head, the could not articulate distinctly for some minutes. The insensibility was not affected. Pulse, immediately after a bit, remarkably low, with evident & frequent intermissions. Belly rather low.

Continence, & functions, natural.
His complaints were renewed in about 4 months since with a febrile attack during which saliva continually flowed from his mouth. For three weeks past a greater quantity of saliva than formerly has flowed from the mouth; & the gaggling noise has been less remarkable.

23

Has passed some ascenders before the severe attack of his present complaint,
 - none here. It appears from the de= scription that there is no insensibility during the act.

(Servant)

Complains of severe pain in the lower part of the breast, very much increased when she lies on her left side, or back. Her difficulty of breathing is so great, that she is frequently forced to change her position from the horizontal to the erect posture, which, she says, affords her some relief. But she does not long remain in this position till she is again obliged to change it. She has a frequent hard, dry cough, which, when she moves about, or makes any exertion, is accompanied with hæmoptysis.

He is also subject to severe fits of tremors, & is now <sup>a week</sup> again together free from them. Pulse 60; of natural strength. Belly brand. Countenance natural.
 Sleeps ill. Her appetite is much im-
